2. Any person, other than the Society or a managing agent, with authority to enter into contracts of insurance to be underwritten by members of a syndicate shall not sub-delegate that authority other than to a director, partner or employee of that person in accordance with the terms of the binding authority or line slip in question, save that a service company coverholder may also sub-delegate its authority under its service company agreement to another approved coverholder in accordance with the terms of a binding authority.

- (1) the use of electronic systems or repositories for the formation, recording and storage of insurance contracts; or
- (2) brokers from producing evidence of cover from such systems or repositories as this in itself does not constitute delegation of authority by the managing agent. In that context, brokers may produce insurer authorised evidence of cover held on the system for onward transmission to the insured provided that the reproduction is a complete and accurate reproduction of the insurer authorised evidence of cover.

This footnote has been included because Lloyd's has received enquiries seeking clarification of this paragraph in the context of electronic systems and repositories. This footnote does not form a part of the byelaw. Lloyd's August 2008.
